With pure, clean lines and understated elegance, the apartment is perched on the hills above Cannes, in France. The entry hall leads to the communal areas - kitchen, dining and sitting - in open plan, with a separate guest WC, and the en-suite master bedroom is kept private behind partition walls. The light and airy pied à terre is furnished with the designer's creations such as the "Shine" coffee table in polished stainless steel and mirrors that reflect the brilliance of the light throughout the interior, tying rough, matt and glossy materials together. The colour white predominates the overall minimalist design, with complimentary, earthy tones disrupted by sparse touches of brass and blue hues for vivacity. The marble kitchen area as well as the moveable mirrored partition that incorporates the TV screen in the living area, were designed by the designer's brother, Denis Bodino with whom she shares their "Made in France" furniture line. The flooring in white varnished oak rounds up the delightful little apartment.
